Christine Savage was guest speaker at our Sales Conference in Sydney in May 2000. To say she was a huge success would be a great understatement.

Whilst I've known Christine for 3 years and I personally relate to her knowledge and concepts, we knew it would be quite different when introducing her to a group of 24 sales people. Christine seemed to have no problem with working with a group (which of course had some "die-hard" sceptics...), but we thought we were taking a risk in having our team members think the company is being run by a group of tree-hugging hippies...

Christine's sessions included creative visualisation, meditation and teachings on life-skills, how the mind works, stress management, breathwork and relaxation techniques. She also saw several individuals privately – at the individual's requests.

The results, after the 3-day-long conference, were very rewarding. Several people had personal break-throughs, others had amazing experiences in the visualisation sessions and everyone – even our die-hard sceptics – took something away with them. I have no doubt that Christine had an effect on everyone's lives – at and following the conference.

At the conclusion of our conference, we ask our team members (remember these are confident, expressive sales people) to give us their feedback. Without fail, the impact Christine had was visible with everyone. The bonding, feeling of 'one' and the individuals' personal development would be summarised by this comment from a new team member – "Thank you for sharing Christine with us. To think that a company would value and invest in us as individuals, not employees, is very humbling. I've been looking for this sort of company all of my working life. Thank you so much."

I have no hesitation in recommending Christine to any other company seeking to develop their team members as individuals, knowing it would lead to a sense of unity and common bond amongst their people. We have already invited Christine to our 2001 conference in Brisbane.

Please feel free to contact me personally if you wish to discuss any of the contents of this letter further.
